PART 1 Post-election themes Across all lawmakers reviewed

01

Key themes across lawmakers

What came up across speeches and interviews, with examples in their own words.

Lowering everyday costs

Benson · Brinks · Dingell · McMorrow

The most common theme. Leaders named groceries, rent, gas, housing, child care, energy and health care, and tied the election result to voters' frustration with prices.

▶ 4:30 Jocelyn Benson: "lower our costs and raise our wages and end corruption"

▶ 5:30 Winnie Brinks: "together we will deliver on our commitment to make life more affordable for all"

▶ 1:17 Debbie Dingell: "the number one thing on everybody's mind working families is how much groceries were costing"

Corruption, corporate power and money in politics

Benson · El-Sayed · Savit

Benson and Savit framed their wins as siding with people over "the powerful." El-Sayed called for getting money out of politics and taking on large corporations that raise prices.

▶ 4:54 Jocelyn Benson: "fight the corruption that too often protects the … powerful and hurts the people."

▶ 3:32 Abdul El-Sayed: "I don't think that you should be left to a few big corporations to just consistently raise rates on you"

¶ Michigan Advance Eli Savit: "an attorney general who would represent the people and not the powerful"

A mandate, and pressure to deliver

Puri · Dingell · Brinks · Camilleri · McMorrow

Leaders described the results as voters demanding change. Dingell warned that voters will send another message if Democrats don't deliver, and Brinks said progress comes from working across parties.

¶ Michigan Advance Ranjeev Puri: “The people of Michigan spoke up tonight and said that they've had enough”

▶ 1:50 Debbie Dingell: “if we don't deliver in the next few years you're going to see them send another loud message”

▶ 2:30 Winnie Brinks: “Real progress doesn't come from one office or one party alone.”

Pushing back on Trump and Washington

Benson · McMorrow · El-Sayed

Benson pledged to stand up to "any bully." McMorrow and El-Sayed criticized the president's record.

▶ 10:12 Jocelyn Benson: “I will be unafraid to stand up to any bully, no matter how powerful”

▶ 0:49 Mallory McMorrow: “He's done none of those things.”

▶ 10:27 Abdul El-Sayed: “you've got a president who wants to defund the Department of Education. I think that's insane.”

Specific plans they named

Benson · El-Sayed · Dingell

Few concrete plans were named. Benson named a state voting rights act; El-Sayed named the federal PRO Act for unions, stopping the Medicaid cuts, and Medicare for All. Dingell named reversing the Medicaid cuts (see Part 2).

▶ 6:43 Jocelyn Benson: “pass a voting rights act for the state of Michigan”

▶ 3:43 Abdul El-Sayed: “I believe we need to pass the [PRO Act].”

▶ 3:03 Debbie Dingell: “one of the first things that we are going to do is to reverse the cuts in Medicaid”

Summary of what was said on health care

From election night (Nov. 3) through Nov. 4, 6 Democratic leaders appeared on camera in 9 speeches, press events and interviews (79 minutes of video). Three of them talked about health care: Abdul El-Sayed (21 statements), Debbie Dingell (5) and Jocelyn Benson (2). Winnie Brinks, Curtis Hertel Jr. and Mallory McMorrow did not mention health care.

El-Sayed said the first thing to do is stop the federal Medicaid cuts scheduled for January 2027. He said people who lose Medicaid will end up in emergency rooms, and that he expects some Republicans, especially from rural communities, to support reversing the cuts. He called for Medicare for All, said Blue Cross Blue Shield holds about 85% of Michigan's insurance market, and said insurers should not be able to raise rates by double digits or do stock buybacks.

Dingell said reversing the Medicaid cuts will be "one of the first things" the new U.S. House majority does, along with reinstating the ACA premium tax credit. She described constituents worried about losing Medicaid after receiving letters from the federal government. Benson listed health care with housing, child care and energy as costs her administration will make affordable, and pledged that women and girls will have access to the health care they need. Ranjeev Puri, quoted by the Michigan Advance, said he "watched healthcare be ripped away from our sick."

No leader mentioned hospitals, nurses or reimbursement, and no one named a specific state health bill. Attorney General-elect Eli Savit's victory remarks, as reported by the Michigan Advance and WLNS, did not mention health care.
